

ANIHCCAM

del 3000

REIMAGINING ITALIAN FUTURISM IN THE 21ST CENTURY

With Spring Break now over, the team focused on getting ready for halves.

Halves: Come and gone

This week had everyone scrambling as Halves presentation was upon us. Halves represent the time that has flown by since the start of the semester. In this presentation we had to display what all has been accomplished in the last two months. The entire process that we took to get to where we currently are was explained. The process, from the humble beginnings to the present mad dash was accomplished through the smooth, oiled machinery called teamwork. Furthermore, we had to recount the challenges encountered and how we overcame them. Lastly, we explained the road ahead and how we intend to clear all the hurdles with flying colors. The presentation was very well received and we are currently waiting for the feedback from the faculty.

All this was from Monday to Wednesday. After the presentations were done, the whole team sat down to discuss the path forward. After this team meeting, it was determined that another pre-visualization was needed before the team committed to anything more. This second pre-visualization will allow us to understand which scenes need most care and if needed, can we cut down on some scenes. We want to understand the bigger purpose of our project and want to ensure the highest possible quality. The scenes have been divided within the team aimed towards the second pre-visualization which would further ensure high caliber work going forth.

Figure 1: Getting ready for halves